Representation matters

At Lean in Energy, we strongly believe that representation matters and if you can see it, you can be it. I would like to send my heartfelt congratulations to the founding cohort of the joint AOW and Lean in Energy 2021 Power List: Pan-African Female Leaders in Energy.

As the world battles to balance and manage the competing demands of the energy trilemma –Security, Equity, Sustainability, it is important that we think collectively to combat climate change and drive DEI within our organisations to enhance the diversity of options and solutions on the table on the journey to Net zero. If we are to meaningfully respond to the environmental crisis and social inequity mounting across the world, we must urgently learn to value sustainable and inclusive ways of thinking, leading and living.

DEI is not a value statement or an initiative for HR, but a reflection of an organisation's leadership and culture. A culture that evolves to wholeheartedly value empathy, collaboration and creativity. Developing this leadership and culture requires deliberate action and active steps to ensure and promote it, whilst walking the talk.

Leaders, your time is now and as the saying goes "We stand on the shoulders of those who came before us" so let's become greater allies and sponsors to our peers and younger versions of ourselves knowing what we know now.
